Happy Spring!

THIS YEAR, RedRover turns 30! When I look back over the 10 years that I've been part of this incredible organization, I'm amazed by how much we have accomplished. And YOU, our valuable supporters, have been such a huge part of our success.

I could talk about our growth, our fantastic volunteers and staff, plus our organizational culture that promotes warmth and compassion in everything we do. But it's the individual stories of animals and people we've helped over the years that really stand out in my mind. I think of dogs like Gunny, a sweet pit bull we helped heal from massive wounds after he was used as a bait dog in dog fighting; and people like Michael, a young veteran with Post Traumatic Stress Disorder, who turned to us to help save Bane, the dog he credited with saving his own life.

Thanks to people like you, RedRover has been there for thousands of animals in crisis like Gunny and Bane, and we remain ever-relentless in our pursuit of innovative, effective ways to prevent animal neglect and cruelty.

And now to the future! I invite you to help us achieve our 30th Anniversary goals and start off the next five years on a continued path of high impact. You can join our campaign to share widely how RedRover, our volunteers, donors, supporters, other organizations and all who help animals are out there every day, putting their best #pawsforward to help animals and spread compassion. See below for how you can join our 30th Anniversary Campaign, and fill out the envelope insert to order our special 30th Anniversary T-shirt.

There are so many ways to help us celebrate in the months ahead!

Thank you for your compassion and for being a part of our 30-year history of changing the lives of animals and the people who love them.

Warmly,

NICOLE FORSYTH
 President and CEO

P.S. Enjoy this 2016 Annual Report edition of Companion, and know that your help makes all of this possible!

KEEGAN CAME TO ME AS AN EMERGENCY FOSTER from a backyard breeder. This breeder chose to breed for appearance, regardless of the chances that the pups could be born with physical defects.

I had just found out my dream career was not to be, as the company was claiming bankruptcy. I felt so destroyed and confused. In comes three-month-old Keegan, who I soon realize was born deaf and blind...but a serious bundle of joy. Keegan makes everything a game, loves everyone he meets and is a sponge when it comes to training.

If this amazing little pup can show us that being double-impaired will not hold him back, then I can overcome losing my job...pick myself up and move on with a smile.

I instantly fell in love with Keegan and so did my fearful, anxious dog Aria.

But in order to adopt Keegan I needed to convince my better half! Adam was quick to respond that he didn't want a dog he couldn't play with. Well, these two are now best friends and have their own special bond.

Keegan and I have been together now for over two years. Every day I come home to the biggest smile and tail wags anyone can ask for. We have met so many wonderful people and showed them that all lives matter; that regardless of his impairments, he can do a whole bunch of tricks, and at the end of the day he is like every other pup. He just wants toys, treats and to be spoiled and loved.

And I do love him — so much. I am beyond blessed. ♥

Lifesaving help for a veteran's best friend

BRANDON IS A DISABLED VETERAN

whose closest companion is his beloved Dalmatian, Baby Girl. Brandon and Baby Girl had been living in Colorado when he decided to move back to his hometown in Pennsylvania. He packed up all their belongings and headed out with a truck, a travel trailer and Baby Girl by his side. Everything was going well until the draft of a passing semi sent his trailer fishtailing down a Missouri highway. Unable to regain control, Brandon's truck and trailer flipped and rolled four times before coming to a stop.

Everything he owned, everything he had, was strewn across the highway. His trailer and truck were totaled. Luckily he walked away with minor injuries, but all he could think about was his sweet Baby Girl who had been thrown from the truck during the accident. He crawled over to lie beside her while they both waited for help to arrive.

Brandon did all he could to make sure Baby Girl was comfortable until they reached a veterinarian who could examine her injuries. Although she appeared to be relatively unharmed, her diagnosis was not good. She had four facial fractures, an abdominal hernia and needed one of her eyes removed.

...Baby Girl's unwavering love and loyalty saved him and helped him cope with his service-related injuries.

The cost of treatment was financially out of reach for a man who had seen all his possessions broken and scattered on a highway. He was heartbroken to think he might lose his Baby Girl, too. Thankfully, Brandon's family immediately jumped in to help. Everyone knew how much Baby Girl meant to Brandon. Her unwavering love and loyalty had saved him and helped him cope with his service-related injuries.

Brandon's family quickly pooled their resources to engage their community. His brother set up a GoFundMe account to help spread the word, and soon there were donations coming in from friends, family and kind strangers. But because Baby Girl required multiple surgeries, they still needed help. That's when a family friend applied with RedRover. One of our case managers contacted Brandon and was able to approve a RedRover Relief Urgent Care grant that same day.

Baby Girl is now back at home with Brandon, where they are both happy and healthy! None of this could have been possible without the tremendous support of Brandon's family, who pulled a community together to make sure Baby Girl got the treatment she needed. And our grants would not be possible without our supporters, who understand the incredible power of the human-animal bond. Thank you! ♥

SUSAN, A SURVIVOR of domestic violence who lost her daughter in 2014, met Chloe, a nine-year-old Chihuahua/Pug mix, while she was volunteering for her local domestic violence shelter. They instantly bonded, and Chloe became a huge support for Susan.

When Susan discovered that Chloe was suffering from severe dental disease and needed immediate treatment, she was desperate to help her beloved dog get the care she urgently needed.

Because of the kindness of donors like you, we were able to give Chloe and Susan a RedRover Relief grant. Now, Chloe has recovered from her surgery and is back to her happy, loving self. Thank you for making this happy ending story possible! ♥

A fantastic reminder of how compassionate humans can be

by Katie Campbell, RedRover Outreach and Partnerships Coordinator

AFTER COMPLETING my RedRover Responders training in November, I didn't expect the opportunity to deploy so quickly. But in February, when thousands of families were forced to evacuate during the Oroville Dam crisis in Northern California, RedRover was called in to assist North Valley Animal Disaster Group (NVADG) in providing emergency sheltering in Chico, not far from our Sacramento-based office. Along with my colleagues, Susie and Laurel, I set off for my very first deployment caring for animal evacuees.

When we arrived at the temporary shelter, I was so humbled to see all of the volunteers — from RedRover and other organizations — who came together to help over 300 animals. It was a fantastic reminder of just how compassionate and empathetic humans can be. Together, we cleaned cages and gave animals food, fresh water, warm bedding and loving care while they awaited reunification with their owners.

During the two-day deployment, I bonded with animals like Molly, a terrier mix who started out timid and frightened in the back of her cage. After some gentle coaxing and a bit of patience, she eventually let me put the lead on her for a walk. As soon as she got out of the cage and into the open, she was more peppy and relaxed. With each visit, she came to the front of the cage more quickly, eager to go for her walk.

I left knowing that I had done something good. I feel fortunate and privileged to have had the opportunity to help in a time of crisis. ♥

Preparing for floods

Families threatened by flooding are encouraged to:

- Bring pets along when they evacuate. Never leave pets behind to fend for themselves in a flood.
- Identify a place ahead of time to evacuate with pets. Many hotels and motels are pet-friendly, and those that aren't often make exceptions during natural disasters. A database of pet-friendly accommodations is available at petswelcome.com or petfriendlyhotelsandtravel.com.
- Identify all pets. Affix a collar with ID tag containing mobile phone number or temporary contact number (such as the phone number of a hotel or relative) to each pet so they can be more easily reunited if lost.
- Assemble an animal disaster kit that includes food, water, medications, a leash or cat carrier for each pet, and photos of each animal with family members to prove ownership if they are lost.

Empowering students to protect animals

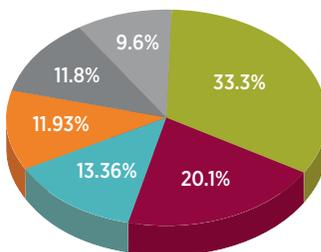

"I love having RedRover Readers volunteers read to my class. The lessons reinforce reading skills that we have covered in class. The lessons also teach kindness. [Through participating in the program,] my students are very empathetic towards our special needs students. Some students have shared stories about showing kindness towards their own pets or animals in their neighborhood.

"One student told a story about a stray dog in the neighborhood. The student saw someone throwing rocks at the dog. The student thought that was mean and told the person to stop throwing rocks.

"I would encourage others to sign up for RedRover!"

I am the proud owner of a dog named Cowboy. He's such a wonderful part of our family, especially since our children are grown. We call Cowboy our son. About five years ago, a cow kicked Cowboy's left front leg, severing a nerve and paralyzing the leg. There have been no problems until August 2016, when he got a serious wound on the leg. The leg had to be amputated to save Cowboy's life. Because of the expensive surgery, I immediately applied with RedRover for assistance. With the help of Laurel at RedRover, the application was accepted, and RedRover approved a generous donation to Cowboy's surgery. This donation has taken a large burden from the cost of the surgery. RedRover is a great organization, and I hope to be able to give back to them some day!
