Greetings!

WOW, 2022 WAS A RECORD-BREAKING YEAR

for RedRover in so many ways! Thanks to supporters like you, RedRover Responders volunteers assisted on 19 deployments this year and we reached the most children ever with our digital and print editions of Kind News magazine. We also reached the highest level of staffing to date at 24 full-time staff to support the tremendous growth of our programs.

Additionally, we've grown our efforts to help people and pets experiencing domestic abuse. Every year, more than 10 million people in the United States are physically abused by an intimate partner — and this abuse affects pets, too. Domestic violence shelters provide a safe and secure place to recover from trauma, but many do not allow pets. The result? Survivors delay or avoid leaving abusers rather than leave a pet behind. Currently, only 17% of domestic violence shelters have onsite pet programs. Thanks to generous support from PetSmart Charities, we are launching our 25 by 2025 campaign this spring to reach our goal of helping 25% of domestic violence shelters in the U.S. become pet-friendly by 2025. You can help by downloading the advocate toolkit available at 25by2025.org.

Please enjoy our Annual Report edition of Companion magazine, and know that we are grateful for you and the part you play for every animal and person we help in their time of crisis.

Warmly,

Nicole

Early Ages Gathering to Learn Empathy through Stories

IN 2022, REDROVER LAUNCHED A PARTNERSHIP with the Sacramento Native American Health Center (SNAHC) to develop and pilot an expanded version of the RedRover Readers program. The program, called Early Ages Gathering to Learn Empathy through Stories (EAGLES), uses Native American authored books about animals to help children explore concepts such as identity, family, community, responsibility, and recognizing emotions, through open-ended discussions.

After much listening and discussion, SNAHC and RedRover developed a curriculum around six books with feedback from the region's American Indian Education programs. We then tested the pilot by having the RedRover Readers team practice reading these books to small groups of Native youth at the SNAHC office, making note of what went well and ways to improve.

Once the curriculum was tested and refined, the RedRover Readers team trained Native teenagers to implement the program with younger students. The training helped the teens learn how to read to students and discuss the human and animal characters in the stories, asking questions about their behavior, body language, and emotions.

Finally, SNAHC held additional readings led entirely by the newly-trained Native youth. The teens read one story per week for six weeks. The younger students enjoyed talking and learning about animals, relating the stories to their own lives and making connections with their own experiences. SNAHC will continue to sustain the program in-house, with the goal of expanding to serve as many American Indian and Alaska Native children within the Sacramento region as possible. ♥

Here's what some of our wonderful sponsors have told us about what their impact means to them:

"I have supported classrooms with Kind News magazine for over 20 years. It makes me feel great that I can have a small part in the positive impact on children and encourage kindness to animals!"

♥ Ann Livingston, Gulf Breeze, FL

"I sponsor classrooms with Kind News because I want kids to understand how to care for animals and that animals have feelings too! I also want kids to know that they can get love and understanding from animals in return. I think the magazine really helps with this."

Helping Coastal Cats Before Disasters Strike

THE RESPONDERS PROGRAM

RECENTLY LAUNCHED A NEW

INITIATIVE that applies our strong sheltering experience to our goal of mitigating the impact of natural disasters on animals and their people.

The Coastal Cats initiative is a partnership between RedRover and Operation Catnip of Gainesville, Florida, to provide proactive support for community cats in hurricane- and flood-prone coastal communities.

By providing TNR (trap-neuter-return) services, technical assistance, and training, we aim to reduce community cat overpopulation and increase the capacity of local cat organizations to continue this work on the ground. Establishing and maintaining control over the community cat population will reduce suffering for the cats and their caregivers when storms hit. The relationships built through Coastal Cats with local cat groups and agencies will also provide a strong basis for future disaster preparedness and response.

We recently completed our second Coastal Cats TNR in Wakulla County, Florida, which was generously sponsored by BISSELL Pet Foundation. Working with local animal welfare group PAWS of Wakulla, we humanely trapped 141 cats in three targeted areas. We are also funding additional spay/neuter surgeries to trap the others we missed during this visit so that local groups can continue to sterilize as many cats as possible and reach a 70-90% sterilization rate in these areas—the point at which populations stabilize and stop growing. The result is fewer cats who will be at risk during hurricanes, and caretakers are provided some relief.

In addition to assisting with mass TNR operations, Coastal Cats also collaborates with local cat groups and leaders to increase their impact. We do this through:

- training and coaching on how to build a TNR program
- engaging the local community
- working with stakeholders to protect community cats
- providing tips to successfully fundraise
- offering ways to support community cat caregivers
- assisting communities to develop their own humane trap-loan programs.

This approach gives local cat groups a much-needed advantage in tackling cat overpopulation, while empowering them to continue this work long after a large-scale TNR event. And because we've been assisting on the ground and getting to know the community—including Animal Control—any hurricane response in this area will be easier and more effective to coordinate.

Our goal is to continue fundraising so that Coastal Cats can continue to help cats living in the most vulnerable disaster-prone areas. ♥

“I’ve worked with several organizations over the years doing outreach, and RedRover is tops regarding leadership. When they branched out into helping other organizations with building enclosures so dogs can be off their chains, and helping build shelter for dogs and cats so women can escape abusive situations, I knew I needed to make working with RedRover a top priority.”

Second Chances in 2022

WE BELIEVE THAT PETS ARE FAMILY, and we know you share our commitment to the special bond that is at the heart of RedRover's mission. Every year, the RedRover Relief program keeps hundreds of families together through crisis by providing financial assistance and resources when they're needed most. Whether a cherished pet is facing a veterinary emergency or the whole family needs safe haven from domestic abuse, they can count on RedRover—and that wouldn't be possible without you!

We hope you enjoy these Happy Tails—just a few among the hundreds of second chances you gave families this past year. ♥

Urgent Care

Georgie was rescued from a suspected dog-fighting operation when she was just a young pup. Nat was quite young herself at the time and today has shared almost half of her life with sweet, 11-year-old Georgie. The pair are best friends, and Nat couldn't possibly conceive of life without her beautiful girl. When Georgie was diagnosed with sarcoma after the veterinarian biopsied a tumor on her right hind leg, Nat was devastated to think she might not be able to afford surgery to remove the tumor—and that she might lose Georgie. Her sister generously offered to pay for half of the cost, but when her financial circumstances changed and she couldn't offer as much support, Nat reached out to RedRover for help.

With a RedRover Relief Urgent Care grant, Georgie is back by Nat's side and thriving!

"I am super appreciative of the help that you have given me, thank you so much. I wouldn't have been able to afford the surgery without it. Georgie is doing amazing and healing very well. She was pretty much back to her old self as soon as I picked her up!"

♥ NAT

Safe Escape

Jenna* reached out to her local domestic violence shelter for help with fleeing as soon as her husband left for work that morning. The night before he strangled her so violently that she lost consciousness, and she knew her sweet cat, Pepper* would be harmed or killed if she left without him. Pepper only had one eye after past abuse from her husband, and Jenna was willing to put her life and safety at risk to protect her boy if she could not find a safe place for them both.

Jenna worked with her shelter advocate to apply for a Safe Escape grant so Pepper could be safely boarded until they could be reunited. She and Pepper later relocated to a new home where they could live together in peace. Before beginning their next chapter, Jenna shared with her advocate what this grant meant to her and Pepper:

"It meant having peace of mind knowing that her pet was safe and no longer in any danger. That she could rest at night without worrying whether she was ever going to see him again or hold him in her arms. She thinks of Pepper as a very important part of her family and would not be able to cope with her situation if she did not have him for support. Without your services, she might not have been able to keep Pepper and that would have been a horrible thing to deal with. So from the bottom of my heart, thank you!"

Safe Housing

Domestic Abuse Women's Network in Washington State

was awarded a Safe Housing grant in the summer of 2015 and opened their doors to survivors and their pets that fall. For more than seven years, they have been making an incredible difference for families in their time of greatest need.

"One elderly shelter resident was living with us for a long time.

She was in a highly lethal situation, but took comfort in the fact she was able to bring her dog Patches.* Patches was uneasy about living in a communal shelter with 12 other families, but he soon became comfortable and the children in the shelter loved to play with him. He was able to run around in the small dog park and his mom was able to have a room with an attached doggy door that led to the outside. A couple of months ago, long-term safe housing became available for Mom and Patches and they were finally able to move out into their own apartment. Thank you for making this possible!"

♥ DV ADVOCATE AT DOMESTIC ABUSE WOMEN'S NETWORK IN WASHINGTON STATE

Join the 25 by 2025 Campaign

Our "25 by 2025" campaign isn't just a slogan, it's our commitment to helping more domestic violence (DV) survivors and their pets find safety and healing together.

In 2007, we began supporting DV survivors through the creation of our Safe Escape grant program which helps with the cost of boarding survivors' pets while they are in shelter. In 2012, we expanded our efforts and created the Safe Housing grant program to help DV shelters create dedicated pet-friendly spaces so survivors wouldn't have to be separated from their pets. The number of pet-friendly DV shelters has grown from 3% to now just over 17%.

This work is as important today as it was back then. The recent "PALS Report" (a joint effort of the Urban Resource Institute and The Hotline) found that 91% of survivors believe that their pets play a significant role in their ability to survive and heal, while half of those surveyed wouldn't consider going to shelter if they couldn't take their pets with them.

It's more important than ever for us to do all that we can to support DV organizations and their communities in creating pet-housing programs that help keep survivors and their pets safely together. Powered by PetSmart Charities, we are launching our "25 by 2025" campaign as part of our commitment to help 25% of shelters in the U.S. become pet-friendly by 2025.

Through this effort, we will continue to listen and learn from organizations about their successes and challenges on their journeys to becoming pet-friendly. And through our collaborative Don't Forget the Pets project, a joint effort of RedRover and Greater Good Charities' Rescue Rebuild program, we will continue to provide resources, information, and support to organizations and communities that are adaptive and reflective of that learning.

We have created a downloadable toolkit full of resources and ways for shelters to show their commitment and to raise awareness in their own communities about their efforts to become pet friendly. And, of course, we'll be highlighting shelters that already welcome pets! ♥

Join our efforts by visiting 25by2025.org to learn how you can help spread the word.
